"Sport has the power to change the world"

World record breaking at 95, Heather Lee can't stop walking

In the driving rain, 95-year-old Heather Lee took to the track last weekend to set a world record in her age group for walking over 1500m, and she's ready to make three more world records in the coming weeks.

"I've never put tickets on myself, I never thought I'd amount to anything really but suddenly I find I'm in the spotlight," Ms Lee said.

"It's a bit overwhelming but it's very enjoyable to think that people appreciate what I do."

Do you have an inspiring story to share and are you competing in Tampere?

Then we are looking for you! We have been approached by a film producer who is interested to make a documentary on athletes competing in Tampere 2023. This can be you as an individual but we are also interested in team stories! The item will also include trainings and interviews during the months leading up to the event in June.

If you have an interesting story yourself or you know someone who would be a great inspiration for the documentary, please don't hesitate and send us an email on community@imga.ch so we can get in touch for further details.
